Colombia

Occupying the northwest corner of South America, Colombia is bordered by the Caribbean to the North, by Venezuela to the East, by Brazil, Ecuador and Peru to the south and by Panama and the Pacific Ocean to the west. Roughly the size of Spain, Portugal and France combined, Colombia has a wide variety of landscapes including mountains, high plateaus, rain forests and tropical beaches. It is also one of the countries with the highest biodiversity in the world. The population of Colombia is around 44 million. Over the past 500 years indigenous people have mixed with immigrants from Europe, Africa and elsewhere to form the current amalgam of ethnic groups. Internationally renowned Colombian artists include novelist Gabriel Garcia Marquez, painter and sculptor Fernando Botero and singer/songwriter Shakira.

Bogotá

Located in the centre of the country at an altitude of approximately 2,600 metres Bogotá enjoys an almost perfect climate with average temperatures varying from 9 to 23 degrees centigrade. The city has a population of around 8 million and is divided into a number of different areas including the historic centre 'La Candelaria', the downtown business district and several modern and prosperous suburbs. Getting around is relatively easy and inexpensive thanks to the city's innovative TransMilenio metro-bus service. There are too many things to do and see in the city to list here but among the highlights are the colonial style buildings of La Candelaria; the Gold Museum with its unique collection of pre-Colombian gold work; the view from the Monastery of Monserrate which overlooks the city and the Botanic gardens which are like a miniature national park.

IH Bogotá

The school is located in an astonishingly beautiful building in the heart of the historical district of La Candelaria. Nicknamed 'el palacio' by the school owners, it is famous for being the building that several former presidents used to dress and have refreshments in before their ceremony of investiture. The building has many original features including beautiful tiled and wooden floors, carved wooden ceilings, a wide, wooden staircase that sweeps up to the first floor, and a spacious interior courtyard that lets in plenty of light. Apart from the reception and offices, the school has 12 spacious classrooms and a study room with computers that students can use before or after class. IH Bogotá also teaches English to people from the local community so there are plenty of opportunities for our international students to meet and make friends with people from Bogotá.

Safety: Colombia still suffers from an image of lawlessness caused by the activities of guerrilla groups and drug cartels. Thankfully, violent crime has tumbled dramatically over recent years. So much so that Lonely Planet, a travel publisher, chose Colombia as one of its top ten travel hotspots for 2006, in large part because of improvements in safety. Of course travellers to Bogotá still need to take care, as indeed they have to in any large city, but the vast majority of visitors will experience nothing but warmth, hospitality, honesty and politeness.
